ISP has a warm atmosphere in kindergarten (24 January 2011)

If you have a child who is about three to five years old, you may consider sending him or her to a nursery. ISP has a good preschool for kids. It is important to send a child to such a school because children who are deprived of this phase of education may remain behind others when they join primary school. Therefore, participating in a well qualified preschool plays major role not only in your child's success in primary school but also in enabling your kids to join in a social environment before they start primary school.
